

Life on the Fly...

by Lori-Ann Murphy

Rainbows!

She comes in colors ev'ry where She combs her hair. She's like a rainbow, coming, colors in the air. Oh ev'ry where, she comes in colors. Wanh, wanh, la la la. Have you seen her dressed in blue? See the sky in front of you; and her face is like a sail, speck of white so fair and pale. Have you seen the lady fairer? She comes in colors ev'ry where; she combs her hair. She's like a rainbow, coming, colors in the air. Oh, ev'ry where she comes in colors. Ooh, wah wah la la la.

—The Rolling Stones

Spring brings upon rainbow season! Rain showers working it out with sunshine in the sky. Rivers thaw as local rainbow trout species find their way to welcome blanket hatches of blue winged olives and caddis. It's rainbow time! Somewhere - there is a piece of water waiting for you to explore or return to fish.

What does it take to know more about how to fish a piece of water? The power of observation. I know I'll be saying this over and over this summer to myself and on our trips and schools.

The goal for most is to become completely submersed in a "fly fishing place" - where we feel connected to the conditions and to the fish. But how do we do this?

Guided and independent fishing require showing up, being as prepared as possible and paying attention to our surroundings. If we have the expectation that just because we showed up or hired the best guide in the world that fish glory will be ours, well, it doesn't work that way.

Over the years guiding some world class anglers I noticed a common trait: An uncanny memory for fish places. I mean out in the middle of nowhere and these anglers remembered every fine detail. Scary. And powerful.

I'm super excited about our summer season. Our main schedule is almost full for 2021. If you would like a private trip please contact me and we can set something up. For those of you wanting to join a RWFFA trip or school - please look at 2022. Next time this year you will be looking at a very cool fly fishing trip scheduled for you!

—Thank you! L-A
