

Life on the Fly...

by Lori-Ann Murphy

Streamer Fishing ~ Reeling it in!

Early season and trout are looking for a hearty meal. The fly is big, ugly or beautiful, weighted or unweighted, single or tandem hook set up. The cast is strong with a controlled loop to get it right where it needs to be. The dance...the fly falls to place, maybe a mend, then strip, strip and whamo! Controlled tight line fishing at its finest.

The fly swimming to entice this take from aggressive trout can be quite visual! We often think of dry fly fishing as our "sight fishing" style - but standing in the drift boat firing off big flies to the bank or around rocks can bring about wide open white mouths from an explosion of trout colors emerging from what seemed like harmless waters. Incredibly addictive. This style of fishing often produces bigger fish. Keeping a balanced system with tippet strength that's able to turn the streamer over and then strong enough to fight a big fish in run-off water conditions allows reeling in a treasure.

It's hard to look up when our full attention is focused on the next spot to fire a cast. As my long time Jackson Hole guide and buddy Paul Bruun calls it - "peppering the bank" - and the game is on. Time to get our casts tuned up and tackle ready for the call. It's springtime!
